Ten Arts Groups Benefit from the Ninth Year of PNC's Community Contributions

ST. LOUIS, May 7, 2019 – Suburban art tours, hands-on making events and collaborative kids-focused podcasts are among the plans for the 10 St. Louis-area arts organizations receiving grants from the PNC Foundation through PNC Arts Alive.

Now in its ninth year, PNC is contributing $250,000 to arts organizations across the Greater St. Louis region as part of its 10-year commitment to local visual and performing arts. The 2019 grant recipients cover a wide range of disciplines, audiences and participatory experiences from arts groups large and small, encompassing the city and suburban areas. Of the 10 organizations, two local arts organizations are receiving PNC Arts Alive funding for the first time. [\[See below for full list of grant recipients\]](#)

“PNC has a legacy of investing in the arts, as we understand the economic, social and civic impacts that a thriving arts and culture community has on our city,” said Michael Scully, PNC regional president for St. Louis. “The programs we are able to fund through PNC Arts Alive strengthen our visual and performing arts community in St. Louis by creating unique experiences and providing access to the arts for hundreds of thousands of people.”

Since 2010, PNC Arts Alive has provided 102 grants to local, non-profit arts groups across Greater St. Louis. The program has earned local and national commendation from the Missouri Arts Council, the Arts and Education Council in St. Louis and Americans for the Arts in New York City. Additionally, in the spring of 2016, PNC announced it would extend PNC Arts Alive for four more years by granting an additional $1 million.

PNC Arts Alive is a multi-year grant initiative of the PNC Foundation that challenges visual and performing arts organizations to put forth their best, most original thinking in expanding audience participation and engagement. To date, this award-winning program has provided $2.75 million in grants to cultural organizations across the Greater St. Louis area. For more information, visit www.pncartsalive.com.
