

PNC Bank Announces New PNC Plaza at ACL Live Residency Program

AUSTIN, Texas, May 11, 2022 – PNC Bank announced a unique partnership today in the form of a new residency program, one that showcases a different local musician each month exclusively at PNC Plaza at ACL Live.

The residency program will run from May to November and will serve as a growth platform for local artists to showcase their talents alongside the touring talent booked within the venue throughout the year. The program is produced in tandem with the Austin Music Foundation's Artist Development Program, which supports the viability, growth and visibility for Austin's musical talent through a number of ways. The residency initiative is also part of the bank's strategic sponsorships it announced in October to become the Official Bank of ACL Live and Austin City Limits.

"The goal of our platform is to establish PNC Plaza at ACL Live as a key stage along the journey of a rising artist in Austin and help them launch their promising careers to new heights," said Dillan Knudson, PNC regional president for Austin. "When the music industry is thriving, so is Austin's economy. This area has an abundance of musicians who want a chance to showcase their exceptional skills, and we're committed to both giving them that opportunity and living our Main Street Banking model that focuses on local investment and community involvement. Music is a cornerstone of this region's prosperity, and we're excited to get this residency program off the ground for Austin, its people and its communities."

Each artist, selected from the Austin Music Foundation's Artist Development Program, will perform regularly throughout their dedicated month during the bank's Party on the Plaza initiative that gives ACL Live attendees for ticketed shows an enhanced experience before concerts and other events at the legendary venue. The program's inaugural artist is scheduled to be Quentin & The Past Lives, a high energy heavy pop/rock band that showcase tones of funk, heavy drums and captivating energy. The band is first slated to play on the plaza at 6 p.m., May 21 before the Bright Eyes concert at ACL Live. They will again play at 6 p.m., May 22, before the Daryl Hall with Todd Rundgren concert, and at 6 p.m., May 23, before Sigur Ros.

In June, Anastasia Hera will grace the PNC Plaza stage. The rap artist - who boasts several successful genre-bending collaborations – will begin her residency on June 5 at 6 p.m. before the Steely Dan concert. She will also perform at 6 p.m., June 6, again before Steely Dan, and once more at 6 p.m., June 11, before Amos Lee.

"Now in its sixth year, the AMF Artist Development Program is established as Austin's most viable program for discovery and development of emerging artists within the city's music industry," said Jennifer Dugas, Executive Director of the Austin Music Foundation. "Our partners, PNC Bank and ACL Live, share AMF's deep commitment to investing in the sustainability of local music and those who contribute to Austin's cultural identity and economy. Creating opportunities for our artists to grow and thrive is at the heart of what we do, and this platform realizes our vision of taking the ADP to the next level. As AMF celebrates its 20th anniversary milestone year, we're thrilled to continue driving impact for our music community in new and exciting ways."

In addition to supporting the Artist Development Program through the residency initiative, PNC will also give a $25,000 grant to the Austin Music Foundation to continue to elevate the program's demonstrated success. The Artist Development Program, launched in 2017, provides an array of support for local artists, including professional development, and one-on-one mentoring, real-time feedback from industry experts, and peer-to-peer collaboration and support, among other services.

"ACL Live is thrilled to launch this residency series with two great partners in PNC Bank and Austin Music Foundation," said Kelly Mosser, Director of Brand Partnerships at ACL Live. "We've seen many Austin musicians grace the stages at ACL Live and 3TEN and we hope PNC Plaza will become another mainstay venue for our fans to enjoy local up-and-coming musicians. PNC Bank's vision for this program is a perfect complement to AMF's mission and ACL Live is honored to host these AMF artists."
