

PNC Bank, Los Angeles Angels Launch Business Leader Recognition Program

Business Angels powered by PNC Bank spotlights local leaders in business

ANAHEIM, Calif., Aug. 1, 2024 – PNC Bank and the Los Angeles Angels have launched Business Angels powered by PNC Bank, a multi-year partnership that recognizes exemplary local business leaders who are making a positive impact across business, industry and community.

Through the Business Angels program, honorees in the community will receive a robust marketing package for their business from the Los Angeles Angels. Assets include a luxury suite for a 2024 regular season game, on-air mentions on Angels Radio AM830, recognition on the Big A LED, a full-page advertisement in Angel Magazine, a chance to participate in an Angels pregame ceremony, and business networking opportunities throughout the program.

“We are proud to partner with PNC Bank on the Business Angels program,” said Angels Chairman Dennis Kuhl. “We understand the impact that local businesses have on the success of our region. This is a great way to celebrate individuals who are excelling in both business and community leadership.”

Business Angels powered by PNC Bank kicked off July 1. The honoree, Laurie Sicaeros, chief strategy officer of MemorialCare, was recognized at the Angels game July 10. Additional honorees will be named at the Aug. 13 and Sept. 17 home games. The 2024 Business Angels program will conclude with a leadership panel discussion with the honorees and Angels executives before the game Sept. 17 when the Angels hosts the Chicago White Sox.

“As a locally rooted bank with national scale and capabilities, PNC is deeply committed to the success of our community,” said Jarrod Ingle, PNC regional president of Orange County and Inland Empire. “Business Angels are pillars of our local community, and we are happy to join the Los Angeles Angels in elevating these leaders who play a critical role in fueling economic growth, job creation and innovation.”
