WEST PALM BEACH, Nov. 3, 2016 – Access to free classical ballet performances, Latino & African-American musical theater, a visual arts festival, 59-piece orchestra performances, critical-thinking digital stories and transportation to a fall concert are among the highlights of six Palm Beach arts organizations, which will receive funds totaling $75,000 this year from the PNC Foundation’s Arts Alive program.

The awards are part of a three-year, $185,000 commitment PNC announced today at the Armory Art Center to bring PNC Arts Alive to Palm Beach County. The non-profit winners represents a wide range of disciplines, audiences and participatory experiences from arts groups’ large and small, city and suburban. [See below for the complete descriptions of grant recipients.]

Throughout 2016, PNC has diligently worked with the Cultural Council of Palm Beach County to develop and bring the Arts Alive initiative to its thriving community.

“PNC is a strong corporate partner for the arts in the United States, and their commitment locally is outstanding,” said Rena Blades, CEO of the Cultural Council of Palm Beach County. “These new grants, in addition to the two awards the Council is making today, support innovative and worthy programs in our cultural sector. We thank PNC for their generosity and vision.”

The Cultural Council of Greater Palm Beach County reports that its creative economy has a $2.4 billion impact on the region. PNC Arts Alive adds richness to local efforts by awarding grants to arts organizations that support fresh and emerging arts programs, value-added public programming and creative use of technology, while seeking to expand audiences.

“PNC has a long history of partnering with organizations that strengthen the lives of our local Main Street communities, and our support of Arts Alive is a strategic investment in this region,” said Cressman Bronson, PNC regional president for Florida East. “We asked Palm Beach’s arts and culture groups to help people experience art in new ways and they delivered on that goal, engaging audiences through a diverse array of innovative programs that showcase this region at its best.”

Bronson said the arts and culture industry in the state of Florida generates $3.1 billion in the state of Florida, creating a total economic impact of approximately $250 million per year in Palm Beach County.

“The arts impact more than our emotions, creates new jobs, boosts tourism and invigorates businesses,” added Bronson. “The bottom line is a strong arts community is a significant driver of economic success. By bringing Arts Alive to Palm Beach County, PNC is helping to bring creative and exciting new programs for people of all ages to this community.”

According to Jeanne Martin, Armory’s director of communications and marketing, “The PNC arts alive grant gives the Armory Art Center the ability to reach a much larger audience of attendees for the first annual West Palm Beach Arts Festival. Bringing more people to the Armory Art Center campus will bring more awareness of what we offer—resulting in higher participation in our high-quality visual arts programming for youth and adults, attendance to the exhibitions hosted in our galleries, and support for our outreach programs providing healing and education to those with special needs.”

Supporting Arts and Economic Development

Since its debut in 2009, PNC Arts Alive! has awarded approximately $13 million in grants to enterprising cultural organizations in Columbus, Ohio, Philadelphia and St. Louis, communities served by PNC and the PNC Foundation.

PNC Arts Alive has supported new exhibitions and festivals, pop-up theater and music performances, mobile arts vans, family arts programs and more. This award-winning program has earned recognition from Americans for the Arts in New York City along with regional arts organizations.

Grants recipients are selected by PNC and a committee composed of officials from arts and community organizations. Applications for the 2017 season will be posted in March. For more information, please visit www.pncartsalive.com.
